BEN: My lord is most gracious.
DOCTOR: Now, the next question is, what can you do for the boy? I want him in something of finer quality.
BEN: Like yours, my lord? Well, I can provide all the quality you need. Jewelled tunics with furred collars, ruby-studded belts, quilted sleeves, laced Lama boots ...
DOCTOR: Yes, quite so ... Well, go away my friend, think about it and return tomorrow.
BEN: I will, my lord. And when the sun rises, I shall be here to transform the boy into a veritable strutting peacock.

U/S.
- DOCTOR WHO: You stupid butcher! Don't you know anything else but killing?
- LEICESTER: Oh, you're a man for talk, I can see that. You like a table and a ring of men, a parley here, arrangements there ... but when you men of eloquence have stunned each other with your words ... we ... we the soldiers have to face it out. And some half-started morning while you speakers lie abed, armies settle everything ... giving sweat and sinew, bodies aye and life itself. /
48. 2 C (16) (TURN)

RICHARD: (cont) Know this,
my Lord of Leicester, that we shall not be "advised" - we have decided on a pact with Saladin
... If that fails - a trial of arms. But we have set our mind and heart
upon this marriage of our sister with Saladin's brother. It shall go forward!
